CLP extends free charging for electric vehicles

CLP Power Hong Kong Limited (CLP Power) has been promoting green motoring in Hong Kong through the development of an electric vehicle charging network. CLP Power today (23 December) announces it will extend free charging for electric vehicles at all 146 charging points at its 39 charging stations until the end of 2015 to continue the promotion of green driving.

As well as extending the free charging service, CLP Power has teamed up with the Hong Kong Housing Authority to launch the city's first Dual-Standard Electric Vehicle Quick Charger at the Kai Tak Development Area (KTD). CLP Power Chief Operating Officer Mr Chow Tang Fai officiated at the launch ceremony for the charger, laying down a new milestone in the promotion of green motoring in Hong Kong.

The charger, located in the Tak Long Estate car park in the KTD, supports both the existing Japanese quick charging standard (CHAdeMO) and the latest European quick charging standard (Combined Charging System or CCS) and enables compatible electric vehicles to be charged up to 80% within 30 minutes.

Looking ahead, CLP Power plans to extend its quick charging network next year with multi-standards quick chargers to improve coverage and convenience for electric vehicle users.

Since 2009, CLP Power has pioneered the introduction of a charging network across the city to allow electric vehicles to be more widely used. Drivers can now charge their electric vehicles at 32 standard and semi-quick charging stations, with 139 charging points covering every major district in Kowloon, the New Territories and Lantau Island.

In addition, there are 7 charging points at 7 CLP Power quick charging stations at the Tak Long Estate, the CLP Power Centenary Building in Jordan, Hong Kong Science Park, the Choi Yuen Plaza, the Shui Pin Wai Estate, the Yau Lai Shopping Centre and Hong Kong International Airport.
