CLP Headquarters Wins Top Architecture and Sustainability Awards

The headquarters of CLP Holdings Limited (CLP) in Kai Tak has received top international and local accolades in recognition of the building's sustainable, people-centric and forward-looking architecture and design.

CLP relocated its headquarters in December 2024 to the Kai Tak Development Area, where Hong Kong's former airport was located. With innovative technologies and materials, the building is one of city's greenest and a showcase of CLP's commitment to sustainability.

Earlier this month, the building earned the highest distinctions at the 2025-2026 International Property Awards held in London, winning Best International Office Architecture and Best International Office Development. Assessed by more than 100 independent experts across multiple stages, the project was recognised for its excellence in design, innovation, sustainability and user experience. Judges commended it as "a carefully crafted corporate headquarters building which is innovative and cutting edge both in design and in the usage of materials."

Complementing its international success, the building has also earned multiple environmental recognitions, including BEAM Plus Platinum, WELL Platinum, LEED Platinum pre-certification and the Hong Kong Green Building Award – Merit, underscoring CLP's efforts in promoting sustainable development and responsible environmental performance.

"These awards recognise not only architectural excellence, but also CLP's approach to embedding sustainability and wellbeing into the way we operate," said T.K. Chiang, Chief Executive Officer of CLP. "As we mark our 125th anniversary, the building reflects our confidence in the city's future and our commitment to shaping more sustainable ways of living and working."
